

Dr. Sarah M. Nusser
Vice President for Research
Iowa State University

Sarah Nusser, professor of statistics, became Iowa State University's vice president for research on Feb. 1, 2014. Nusser, who joined the Iowa State faculty in 1992, is an expert in survey and statistical methods. She holds bachelor's and master's degrees in botany from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and North Carolina State University, respectively, and master's and doctorate degrees in statistics from Iowa State. She is a former director of Iowa State's Center for Survey Statistics and Methodology.

Term: Ex-Officio